

Cindy Mann is executive director of the Center for Children and Families (CCF) and has extensive experience in the design, implementation, and analysis of federal and state policies affecting children and families. A research professor at the Georgetown University Health Policy Institute, and an associate commissioner with the Kaiser Commission on Medicaid and the Uninsured, Professor Mann has devoted her career to problems of social justice. Ms. Mann's experience includes federal CHIP and Medicaid administration, directing health policy for the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, and working on the design and implementation of health programs at the state level. She has written extensively on these topics and has presented legislative testimony at both the federal and state levels. Ms. Mann holds a law degree from New York University School of Law and an undergraduate degree from Cornell University.