

Job Announcement: HIVMA Seeking Advocacy Coalition Convener

The HIV Medicine Association is seeking an Advocacy Coalition Convener to work 20 to 25 hours a week managing advocacy and grassroots activities for a national coalition of medical providers that care for people with HIV within the Ryan White program. In conjunction with the executive director and coalition leadership group, the convener will develop and implement a strategic plan for HIV medical provider program engagement and coalition advocacy activities. The individual will staff the coalition steering committee, develop policy communications and advocacy and educational materials; lead advocacy efforts on Capitol Hill and with federal agency staff; establish a vibrant grassroots network of HIV medical programs; and represent the Coalition with other Ryan White stakeholders.

Qualifications:

A bachelor's degree with at least three to five years in lobbying or advocacy experience, preferably in health care. Strong written and verbal communication skills will be important to advance the coalition's advocacy priorities and interact with prospective and active coalition members. Ability to work independently and to oversee the development of a coalition that has been operating informally for nearly two years. Experience with grassroots organizing and conducting outreach preferably within the medical provider community desirable.
