My Future Goals I would like to become a children's hospital director/children's program coordinator. Additionally, I would like to publish a children's inspirational book and have all the illustrations done by children with chronic illnesses at various hospitals. I would have all of the proceeds go toward research at St. Jude's Children's Hospital.
What's best about the School of Public Health and Health Services at GW? The best thing about the School of Public Health and Health Services at GW is the wealth of knowledge of the professors who have worked and/or done research in many arenas. Additionally, SPHHS is great because all of the students represent a community that is always eager to learn from each other in order to decrease health disparities around the world.

What's best about living in the Washington, DC Area?

The best thing about living in the Washington, DC area is the access to officials who have a substantial influence on public policy. Additionally, this area is comprised of many diverse backgrounds/cultures that make learning and having fun a very positive experience! All of the museums, monuments, and shops provide opportunities for educational advancement and a great way to have fun!

My message to applicants:

There are many people in the world who are counting on others to be passionate, steadfast, and concerned about the health and wellness of our nation. Your efforts to help others will extend farther than this university and the GWU community will give you the inspiration to do more. GWU will enhance your knowledge and provide you with the additional skills and resources to ultimately change someone's life and influence the health of our world for years to come.
